The Art Dealers Association of America has named the 75 exhibitors drawn from its memberships who will participate in its upcoming 2024 Art Show, scheduled to return to the Park Avenue Armory from October 30 to November 2. As with years past, fair will be launched by a VIP preview on October 29 to benefit the Henry Street Settlement.

More than half of this year's exhibiting galleries will present solo booths at the fair, with highlights including Martha Jackson Jarvis at Susan Inglett Gallery, Tina Barney at Kasmin, Billie Zangewa at Lehmann Maupin, Lee ShinJa at Tina Kim Gallery, and Chase Hall at Pace Prints. First-time exhibitors include Canada, Hales Gallery, Charles Moffett, and Timothy Taylor.

For its 36th edition, the Art Show will introduce two new programs. The first is called “Spotlight On...” that will focus on a different city each year, with the inaugural spotlight being on Houston. As part of this initiative, the fair will organize a panel and a series of video interviews exploring the city’s art scene. At the fair, four Houston-based galleries will have booths: Inman Gallery, McClain Gallery, Josh Pazda Hiram Butler, and Sicardi | Ayers | Bacino.

The fair will also partner with the professional curators organization AAMC Foundation to host a convening on the topic of “Leadership Now” in the curatorial field. The convening will bring together some 60 curators from nonprofits for a series of closed-doors discussion. (A similar curatorial initiative has long been a hallmark of the Expo Chicago fair.)

In a statement, dealer Anthony Meier, the ADAA's president, said, "The intimate environment created by The Art Show in the Park Avenue Armory is unparalleled, as it offers a unique platform for dealers to take risks they might not consider at other fairs: presenting solo exhibitions by less established or underknown artists and thoughtfully curated group exhibitions that shed new light on a historical moment or artistic movement."
