The Art Dealers Association of America is throwing open the doors at local member galleries Thursday-Sunday, Aug. 3-6. The Bay Area Art Gallery Weekend will include performances, curatorial tours, lectures, panel discussions and screenings during special late and weekend hours.

Participating Bay Area ADAA galleries include: Altman Siegel, Anglim/Trimble, Berggruen, Rena Bransten Gallery, Catharine Clark Gallery, Crown Point Press, Fraenkel Gallery, Haines Gallery, Hosfelt Gallery, Jenkins Johnson Gallery, Anthony Meier Gallery, Modernism, Gallery Wendi Norris, Paulson Fontaine Press and Jessica Silverman Gallery.

The weekend begins Thursday evening with a lecture by Sarah Mackay, assistant curator of prints, drawings and photographs at the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco, at Hosfelt Gallery as well as a special performance by drag artist Fauxnique at the neighboring Catharine Clark Gallery. Friday evening, ADAA galleries at the Minnesota Street Project will be open late. And Saturday, galleries in downtown San Francisco and Chinatown as well as Paulson Fontaine Press in Berkeley are expected to host special events, including a lecture by artist Tom Marioni at Crown Point Press. Sunday events will be hosted in the afternoon at Haines Gallery at Fort Mason and Anthony Meier Gallery in Mill Valley.

If you haven't had a chance for gallery going so far this summer, this is a great chance to catch up before the fall shows begin in September.
