The Art Dealers Association of America Announces Participating Member Galleries and Highlights for The Art Show in February 2019

Featuring Curated Solo Exhibitions, Group Shows, and Joint Presentations by the Nation's Leading Art Galleries

New York, NY, September 26, 2018 – The Art Dealers Association of America (ADAA) today announced the exhibitors for The Art Show, the nation's most respected and longest-running art fair. Organized annually by the ADAA, a nonprofit membership organization of art dealers across the country, The Art Show admission throughout the week and proceeds from the Gala Preview benefit Henry Street Settlement, one of New York's leading social service, arts, and health care organizations. The 2019 edition will take place February 28 through March 3, 2019, with the Gala Preview on a new night, Wednesday, February 27, offering an unparalleled opportunity for new and established collectors and the public to engage in dialogue with the nation's leading art gallerists and to learn about significant artists and artworks from the 19th century to today. Since the fair's inception, The Art Show has raised nearly $31 million for Henry Street Settlement.

“For over three decades, the nation's most respected art galleries have come together to support Henry Street Settlement and engage the public with the breadth of their knowledge and quality of their programs,” said Andrew Schoelkopf, ADAA President, and cofounder and partner of Menconi + Schoelkopf. “This spirit of collaboration is the driving force behind The Art Show and the ADAA's history and mission. We are proud to offer members an annual platform that is truly representative of the ways that galleries create meaningful experiences with art and foster the relationships with artists and collectors that power the art world.”

“Our invaluable partnership with the ADAA enables the Settlement to continue our 125 year legacy of innovation and dedicated service to New Yorkers in need,” said David Garza, Henry Street Settlement's executive director. “The Art Show is our greatest source of flexible funding, allowing Henry Street to meet our community's evolving needs, including access to the arts, necessary guidance to succeed academically, mental health counseling, and shelter from homelessness and domestic violence.”

The Art Show 2019 will feature many first-time exhibitors, including Kayne Griffin Corcoran (Los Angeles), Luxembourg & Dayan (New York), Jessica Silverman Gallery (San Francisco), and Venus Over Manhattan (New York), as well as founding ADAA member Castelli Gallery (New York), which returns to the fair after more than two decades. ADAA members will showcase an incredible range of artists, practices, and genres – from the most dynamic contemporary artists, to seminal figures of the 20th century, to discoveries of lesser known masters and new talent. Nearly half of the fair will be devoted to solo exhibitions, such as Sean Kelly Gallery, displaying new works created for The Art Show by Sam Moyer; Pace Gallery, showing a selection of paintings and works on paper by Alfred Jensen made from 1958 through the 1970s and demonstrating the artist's important role in Conceptual Art; and Michael Rosenfeld

Gallery, highlighting the work of Henry Ossawa Tanner (1859–1937), in what will be the first exhibition of the artist by a New York gallery since 1967.

Marking the largest number of collaborative projects in The Art Show’s history, six galleries have chosen to work together on joint exhibitions: Anglim Gilbert Gallery and P.P.O.W will show the works of painter Judith Linhares and sculptor Annabeth Rosen; Salon 94 and Jessica Silverman Gallery will present the work of Judy Chicago flanked by younger female artists from the galleries’ impressive rosters; and Fraenkel Gallery and David Zwirner will explore links and resonances between the works of Diane Arbus and Alice Neel.

Each year, ADAA members wishing to participate submit proposals that outline inventive curatorial concepts for single artist, dual, or group exhibitions—a process that ensures the highest standard of artistic quality and connoisseurship that has distinguished the fair for over three decades. ADAA’s Art Show Committee selected 72 proposals from member galleries that represent the breadth and depth of the Association’s art and scholarly expertise, providing audiences with a diverse range of works from the mid-nineteenth century through today, by artists of a variety of genres, practices, and national and international origin.
